

PSYCHOTHERAPY TRAINING SEMINARS

PAUL GIBNEY Ph.D.

CHANGE IN FAMILIES AND THERAPY

Crises and Development

Wednesday May 31, 9.30-5.00

The seminar will focus on change and evolution in families, outlining how the therapy can 'fit' with the developmental process of the family to enhance the change process, which varies in its predictability.

- change as developmental process
- the role of therapy in this development
- the unpredictable and the deliberate in the change process
- chance and irreversibility.
- therapy as a 'nursing' process
- provoking difference in therapy

RESPONDING TO SEXUAL ABUSE

Reconstruction, Deconstruction, and Compassion

Thursday June 1, 9.30-5.00

The seminar will focus on the juxtaposing demands in therapy with sexually abused adults between developing accurate recollection, deconstructing the experience and the effects on the self, and the necessity for therapeutic compassion.

- repetitive abuse in the relationship in the therapy
- Time and Space in creating therapy as a holding environment
- the personal boundaries of the therapist in the therapy

ENGAGING MEN IN THERAPY

Developing Emotional Maps

Friday June 2, 9.30-5.00

The seminar will focus on the commonly presented themes in therapy with men, and the difficulties of making emotional connections with male clients and cultural stereotypical resistance of men seeking help.

- methods of engagement
- developing emotional maps both for the client's life and the therapy process.
- use of both personal and classical mythology in the therapy agenda
- dreamwork, and other avenues to unconscious life

Dr. Paul Gibney is a remarkably inspiring, entertaining speaker and trainer who combines a vast knowledge of theory and an irreverent independence of thought to teach psychotherapy in engaging, humorous and innovative ways. His creativity, warmth, and informality go hand in hand with careful preparation and a sensitive commitment to the therapeutic craft. A Psychotherapist in private practice in Brisbane, and the coordinator of a highly respected family therapy training program, Paul is among the most prominent and talented presenters in this country, and is well known for his ability to weave integral theoretical issues in psychotherapy with poignant clinical material, presented in depth to illustrate clinical principles in everyday practice. These training seminars will illustrate how systemic and psychodynamic therapies are complementary paradigms which combine to give a depth perception of cases, and to multiply opportunities for meaningful intervention. Following his 1993 & 1994 heavily attended workshops, the 1995 seminars will present new material, expanding and developing the complexities of the topics, and providing further substantial material and discussion for participants. The seminars have been designed to be appropriate for participants at various levels of experience and various levels of exposure to Dr Gibney's work and ideas.
