CHILDREN'S RIGHTS: WHAT CHILDREN THINK ABOUT THEM

2

Mary Nixon and Fatimah Haron

This study is a continuation of work identifying how children themselves view their rights. In this cross-cultural study the authors provide a unique insight into what children think their world should be.

BEYOND NORMALIZATION: SOCIAL ROLE VALORISATION

6

Michael Steer

In this article the author explores Wolfensberger's most recent views on the concept of normalization and that this must influence the goals and strategies of normalization programs.

ORGANIZATION THEORY AND DYNAMICS: PERIPHERAL KNOWLEDGE OR AN ESSENTIAL COMPONENT OF TREATMENT

8

Margarita Frederico

This paper focuses on the environments and cultures of human service organizations, and suggests that knowledge of these components is important knowledge to a practitioner in an organization.

MUNCHAUSEN SYNDROME BY PROXY: THE NEED FOR SERVICE INTEGRATION

13

Robyn Batten

In this article the author explores the problem of identifying and working with families where the caregiver fabricates details of the child's illness. Approaches leading to successful intervention are identified.
